Types of Surgery

This is MTF/AMABF surgery only. The index page contains a few links to FTM/AFAB surgery.

SRS

The main techniques, in approximate order of popularity

- Penile-inversion and its variations. The most common technique and is practiced by most surgeons.
- Non-penile inversion and its variations practiced in Thailand. Said by some to be superior to penile inversion.
- Colonvaginoplasty. Not much known about this compared to the other techniques and conflicting reports about it, ranging from significant problems to superior results.
- Peritoneal. Fairly new for trans surgery, but becoming quite popular.

- Penile Preservation Vaginoplasty. Surgery to get a vaginal while keeping the penis. This surgery is relatively recent.

There's lot of different names/acronyms for this, and I'm just using SRS out of long term habit. Also GRS, GCS, GAS.

Non-Penile Inversion

Suporn, Chettawut, probably others in Thailand.

Colonvaginoplasty

Sometimes used after an initial SRS has failed or depth is not sufficient. Has more restricted BMI requirements than other SRS techniques (eg Chettawut less than BMI 28 vs 35, age less than 45, weight less 80kg).

Olmec in India have a variation on this technique.

- <https://supornclinic.com/suporns-non-penile-inversion-srs-technique> - "he Suporn Technique also harvests tunica vaginalis from the testes. Tunica vaginalis derived from the abdominal peritoneum is a serous membrane that covers the testes. Because the testes per se are not used in the creation of the female genitalia, the tunica vaginalis offers an easily harvested and useful addition – where necessary – to line the vaginal cavity. This – along with urethra mucosa – is dramatically less invasive than a peritoneal pull-through technique."

The procedure went normally and healed well. Everything else is intact, I never ended up having GCS. I was grateful to never have to feel testicular pain ever again, but I was wrong! A couple of weeks ago I did yoga for the first time in years and ended up thinking I pulled a muscle in my groin area... I was admitted to the hospital the following day, skipping me ahead of a bunch of people because of the whimpering and clawing at my seat in the lobby... The searing agony came back in just a time for them to put me on heavy medication and kept me overnight. Once they had the MRI they found that one of my spermatic cords had gotten tangled in the inguinal canal and seemingly pinched with an artery. It then got swollen and stuck there... They said they'd perform surgery if it comes back. If I did have surgery, the surgeon would have made an incision in the pelvic region a couple inches above the swelling and snipped the spermatic cord higher up so it could never tangle again. So... if you're thinking about getting an orchi it couldn't hurt to ask your surgeon to snip a little higher, right? lol"

I actually specifically ASKED my surgeon which kind of ligations he'd use before my orchi cause I didn't want to get stuck with clips, you'd have to call them up and ask what they used."

Scrotoectomy

Removal of the entire scrotum, including testicles. Best not do this if you plan on having SRS in the future as the tissue is useful.

Adding Depth

- reply to 6 weeks postop srs AMA | minimal depth | combined method | Dr. Morath | Munich, Germany by galjer10n in 2021 - "I agree - zero depth for me was a fairly quick recovery! When having my canal added later that alone seemed to take longer - even though all the exterior and clitoris was already done and in tact. ... Just because I could have mine added after the fact, it was super difficult to get! I had issue with insurance and other things....it very well could have cost me out of pocket had my surgeon not been so involved. He was also a bit hesitant on doing it, and now I have a permanent scar across my lower abdomen, so bathing suits are gonna be a bit difficult to find the right one and such. Also I had to go through two medical leaves (12 weeks total) but I was fortunate to have a good position with a caring company - so that wasn't too much of an issue. ...Just be 100% sure you want to go zero depth! Its not easy and its not always possible (per my surgeon) to have it added later. "

 - Zero depth after thoughts and whats next by galjer10n in 2021 - "I had zero depth GCS on 8/4/2020. I went this route mainly due to major dysphoria and I was only interested in aesthetics. However, this surgery did something major for me - my dysphoria is all but non-existent anymore! I'm sure coming out and getting name changed and all played a big part there. What I notice now is I love who I am, and I feel very good about myself- something I have NEVER felt. This has also made me realize something else -while zero depth wasn't a regrettable choice, I now feel there is more to life, things I was never interested in prior as they never gave me any thoughts, now, probably because I feel so damn good, I see as options! I won't go into details there. ...While I have no regret going this route as I have the aesthetics I wanted, I do wish I'd have felt about myself how I feel now back then as I would have made another decision."

Surgeons who (probably) do this procedure include

- Peter Davis (USA) - "For his gender non-conforming patients, Dr. Davis also performs gender nullification, also known as male to eunuch or "smoothie" procedures. The procedure includes a complete penectomy, orchiectomy, a reduction of the scrotal sac, and shortening of the urethra. The goal is to leave the area as a smooth unbroken transition from the abdomen to the groin. Although, an inconspicuous midline scar and shortened urethra will still be present. Dr. Davis does also offer the option of retaining the highly sedate distal penile tissue (which normally makes up the clitoris in a typical gender reassignment procedure), which he "buries" in the deep tissue of the lower mons above the urethra, akin to a "hidden" clitoris." <https://www.davisplasticsurgery.com/services/gender-nullification>

My surgeon said it's the same surgery except for the things I didn't want like the labia and pocket for penetration. He even created a "clit" as he calls it. I tell people it's a button, because people associate a clit with a vagina. I've had a a very good experience with him, he's very direct and easy to work with, and answers questions completely. He responded to email very quickly, even on his surgery days. The people I know who have had the vaginoplasty are taking testosterone, and live as a male socially, as I continue to do, now with no genitals. The fact that this surgeon will help people transition MtF, those who want a "mangina" (their own term, not mine) and Male to Nullo shows he's very flexible. I highly recommend him. My own therapist retired during the pandemic, and my letters were too old for the insurance to accept, but he even recommended a therapist that works with him and it made things so easy."

Virtual Penectomy

This involves injection of local anesthetic into the nerves of the penis to remove sensation. It's supposed to be temporary, but can apparently result in a permanent loss of sensation. If you were to have SRS later on I'd assume you would continue to have no sensation. It seems like a really bad idea.

Keeping Testicles

Keeping them attached rather than taking them home. That's elsewhere on this page.

A post on Susans says that keeping testicles after SRS (by moving to the abdomen) has been done in the past, that it was common in the 1950's, started by Elmer Belt, and that a Tess Cowen had done it.

My surgeon was Dr. Dany Hanna out of Texas. The procedure was pretty standard overall. More scrotal tissue had to be left attached to house my testes externally in the outer labia and he anchored them in place. I have a clit and possibly inner labia. I'm still very swollen so time will tell with aesthetics. Visually the results are consistent with Dr Hanna's work. I have almost 3" of depth, that's as much as I could get with all things factored in. I'm looking forward to finishing healing. Dr Hanna and team were awesome and he was VERY realistic with me every step of the way. He definitely delivered despite my having a rare request. He does recommend I get my testes examined every couple of year to ensure things are still good down there. I am not on hormones and do not require them."*

In this view, "n" indicates the patient's navel, and "(t)" the testes, with the patient's fingers on either side. ...especially Tess, summer 2000. After much deliberation and some consultation, Tess underwent a unique medical procedure. While penile inversion was performed, the testes were not removed. Instead, the surgeon relocated them superior and anterior to the inguinal canals, approximating the location of the ovaries in a genetic female. While men with undescended testicles face an increased risk of testicular cancer, no studies have been done on the risks posed by the surgical re-ascension of the testicles. In Dr. Cowell's case, the testes lie just below the dermis, so that they can be palpated to a certain degree for examination. A full examination, though, requires the use of a modern radioimaging device, a procedure which Tess will undergo at regular intervals for the rest of her life." - note the trans patient is Dr Tess Cowell.

Undescended testicles have a higher risk of cancer than normal, and are often removed. This suggests that not removing testicles during SRS would increase the risk of cancer, but I'm not aware of any studies (and there probably aren't any due to the small numbers doing this)

- BCCL to stop erections part three: pain management and healing so far by j3553k in 2024 - "Currently, my penis does still extend a bit during an "erection", but it doesn't go up at all, just extends. When I get an "erection", I'd say it's about half the length of an erection pre-op. I imagine that as the severed corpora cavernosa tissues atrophy, the amount of extension will go down. However, since there's no blood in the corpora cavernosa, it's very squishy. It's quite a different feeling than erections pre-op. You can kinda see what I mean by getting hard and squishing your glans into your corpora cavernosa (or maybe by pinching below your glans and squishing it into your fingers). One thing to note - I was a grower pre-op (rather than a shower), so that might have an impact on "erections" post-op due to the difference in tissues. I didn't have extreme dysphoria over erections (I did have some), but I definitely have euphoria now that they're gone! In my experience, dysphoria/euphoria are very personal things, so I couldn't say for sure how you would react."

So, yesterday he came over to my apartment. The procedure I was completely awake for and it was horrible, horrible pain. My testicles kept going back inside my scrotum so he kept having to push them out. Then he got one off and the artery started bleeding. He sutured it (badly) and then got the other one out and off. By the end of it I had been screaming and writihing in pain, but he finished and I was so happy to have them gone. He left me and my partner for me to rest in bed. Well, about ten minutes later I heard what sounded like water being poured onto the bed and there was blood everywhere. It was just gushing. So, my partner called the paramedics. They came and got me into the ambulance which was hard because I live on the second floor and I could not stand up without possibly completely bleeding out. I got to the hospital and they put me into proper surgery. They reopened me up, cleaned me out, made sure to remove any debris the first guy left over and now I am still here, still in immense pain. The police were called by the hospital too and my unlicensed surgeon is now under investigation. I feel a little bad for him since he was such a nice guy, or seemed to be... The "Surgeon" was arrested last night so he will not be able to do his risky business again. While I feel kind of bad for him after reading comments here I think it is probably for the best"

Post-Op Anatomy

I'll collect a few results here to illustrate various points of post-op results. I find it helpful to look with legs closed, open, and internally/labia apart as different things can be seen in each. Sometimes what looks very good with legs closed is not so good with legs apart or labia spread. In particular look closely at the labia majora, labia minora, anterior commissure, posteriour commissure, inside vulva. Some problems of SRS, eg assymetry of labia, can be fixed or improved by revision, but I don't know how that varies among surgeons.

In porn its quite common to obscure the view with hands or toys, and presumably its intentionally as sometimes you'll never find a photo without that.

Stopping HRT Before Surgery

Most surgeons require HRT to be stopped before surgery. The main exception appears to be implants/pellets for which you would time the surgery for when estrogen levels are low.

WPATH 8 Standards of Care (2022) say stopping estrogen before surgery is no longer necessary.

- <http://marcibowers.com/transfem/resources/faq/#discontinue-my-hormones> - "The time-honored dogma for patients undergoing vaginoplasty is that estrogens increase the risk for blood clots and that all hormones must be discontinued. This suspension of hormones leaves patients moody, depressed, achy and overall not feeling well around the time of surgery. On the other hand, we do not stop hormones or birth control pills in natal women undergoing gynecologic surgery. My feeling is that those same rules can apply for our patient population so long as we drop doses as low as possible. Such has been our philosophy since 2003 without incident. We do not interfere with those who have already discontinued their HRT on the advice of their home physicians or specialists. Dropping the dose as low as possible 4 weeks prior to surgery is our current advice except in patients with higher risk."
- <https://transcare.ucsf.edu/guidelines/feminizing-hormone-therapy> - "There is no evidence to suggest that transgender women who lack specific risk factors (smoking, personal or family history, excessive doses or use of synthetic estrogens) must cease estrogen therapy before and after menstrual cycles using a lower dose of estrogen, and/or changing to a transdermal route if not already in use."

Real Life Experience (RLE)

The WPATH Standards of Care version 7 require (page 106) one year of living in your preferred gender (and HRT) before genital surgery. The one year is known as RLE, or sometimes RLT (Real Life Test) as in you don't get your SRS without passing it. Note that the WPATH SOC is not a legal requirement, surgeons are not required to follow it, and it is open to some interpretation. See the wiki introduction page on Medical Guidelines for more. Note also that version 8 of the WPATH SOC has some updates in related to this.

Its possible, though rare, to get SRS without even presenting/identifying female or having any intention of socially transitioning. Lots of trans people don't believe this is possible (and some believe it shouldn't be allowed). You must take estrogen or testosterone afer removing the testicles otherwise you'll be at risk of osteoporosis (this is very bad) and other problems. As evidence its possible, and with reputable surgeons:

Psychs for SRS letters

SRS letters are usually written in accordance with the requirements the WPATH Standards Of Care and the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders \(DSM-5\).

The WPATH SOC is a set of best practices for treating transgender people, while the DSM-5 contains the standard diagnostic criteria for being transgender.

Neither are laws nor are they absolutely required to get genital surgery, but its very difficult to find a surgeon/psych who doesn't follow them, or at least go through the motions. Insurance companies may make things even more difficult. Thailand does have laws on genital surgery that are not exactly the same as WPATH and requirements does vary somewhat between surgeons.

<https://thegalap.org> - "The GALAP Movement. We are a group of transgender, nonbinary, and allied mental health clinicians in the U.S. who believe in improving access to letters for clients who are seeking gender-affirming medical care. We resist the harmful practices of gatekeeping and believe in an informed consent model where clients can affirm their gender identity without the steep cost of sessions with mental health professionals and reductionist clinical practices. As such, we want to create a movement towards to providing free and low-cost letters for gender affirming access to medical care."

Informed Consent

There's very few surgeons who do informed consent for genital surgery. If this is of interest its generally more practical find a psych who will write you a letter without making a big deal of it. Informed consent is common for other trans surgeries.

I must say that Dr.Peveller's services have not met my expectations. Communication outside of the chat service has been slow, vague and infrequent... Since Peveller does not hold any degree related to psychology, he does not meet the WPATH criteria of being a licensed psychologist signee. Therefore, the letter must be endorsed by a second psychiatrist in-house at the clinic before surgery. The fee for this meeting is 2,000 THB. This will "upgrade" the referral to be WPATH compliant... I'd no longer recommend against using Dr.Graham Peveller's services. It is, however, important for me to inform anyone interested to lower your expectations of Peveller's communicative abilities. He suffered from a major injury, and probably has some ways to go with recovery. For those with >3 months time remaining, I'd shoot him an email well in advance."*

HRT

You need to take adequate estrogen (or testosterone) after surgery to avoid medical problems. The worst seems to be osteoporosis.

Low Testosterone

Some women need to take testosterone after SRS (or orchiectomy) as a result of too low testosterone.

This is also a problem for some cis-women.

High Testosterone

Its not common, but the the adrenal glands produce testosterone and after SRS or orchiectomy they can in some cases increase production to compensate for sudden loss.

From a pdf about SRS with Suporn

The clinic's 'Post-Op Care' book says that in about 10-15% of cases "unwanted male characteristics can return immediately post-operative" as the body attempts to make up for the loss of testosterone and that the treatment is anti-androgens "for at least 3 months". My doctor

Dilation

Assuming no complications

1. Dilating is critical early post-op, and if you don't dilate you'll likely permanently lose depth. Permanent loss of depth can only be fixed with further surgery, possibly peritoneal or colon

r/TransSurgeriesWiki

Create

provide stronger painkillers.

2. Your body will tell you how often you need to dilate. If its easy you can expermint with dilating less often, but if it gets harder you need to dilate more. If you dilate less because its difficult it will get worse and worse. If dilation is difficult you need to do it more, not less.
3. Long term there's many reports of women not dilating for years with no permaent loss of depth. It can however take some effort to regain depth.

Note that some cis-women dilate

After Robert Abbe performed one of the earliest vaginoplasty procedures in 1898 for a patient with vaginal agenesis,³⁴⁵ he reported that: The gravitation of the abdominal contents tended to shorten the vaginal canal, and I saw that it would be necessary for her to wear a vaginal plug part of every day at least. Several varieties were tried, but nothing was so comfortable as a good-sized wax candle smoothed and rounded, and kept in by a T-bandage.

The small series is probably too small to be useful, ignore that one. Not being too long, they can remain comfortable to wear for hours. Makes the first few inches a breeze at your next dilation session especially if the scar ring contraction gets really bad... Fuze makes a series of five cylindrical silicone dilators up to 1.5" diameter and 5.75" insertable. The first couple are probably useless, but the latter three (1", 1.25", 1.5" diameter) are perfect for wearing overnight with a couple tight pairs of underwear. How can the epistemological tools and frameworks of biomedical engineering and critical gender studies be used to contest each other's work, engender new collaborations, and broaden our conceptual horizons as to the limitations and potentials of each discipline? On one hand, this study asks how the Thai sex/gender system affects the health, healthcare, and well-being of LGBTQ. To answer this question, I conducted 32 in-depth semi-structured interviews with Thai LGBTQ+ patients and healthcare providers. Over time, I was able to get it in uninflated, but with no hope of getting it out equally uninflated. A few weeks ago, I decided to try again. I got it to a size that was probably as thick as a wrist, more or less, and pushed it out. I was very turned on and excited by being able to do this. It burnt just a tiny bit, but it was absolutely nothing in comparison to vaginismus at it's worst. The toy was a pain level I could enjoy as a sadomasochist, which was absolutely never something I could say about vaginismus. But afterwards, I was touching myself, and I was just... in awe of how "loose" it was. I almost fisted myself, but not quite. I figured this was just in the moment and would snap back to the regular tightness, like how it does/did after dilating or sex, but... it didn't entirely. In the weeks following, I found myself putting a finger in with ease and being totally amazed. It was always difficult to get a finger in before, always, and now I could just do it anytime. I would do it just to prove to myself that it still worked. Whether I was masturbating or just sitting around by myself, I'd do it just to feel how easy it was. I wondered if this meant I was cured, if this is what a normal vagina feels like. ... So, the day before yesterday, I attempted sex without dilating first, and IT WORKED! It went in easily and naturally, with no preparation, like never before, and it felt GOOD! And at first, this is wonderful."*

I continued to dilate 30 minutes 5 times a day with 1-4 dilators. I had to have an operation to remove the scar tissue. I lost depth due to the operation. I was 3.5 inched deep post the second operation... I was going to get peritoneal GCS due to the depth issue. I was instructed by RBL to get a doctor the demonstrate pelvic floor exercises to increase depth. I did and it was my primary care doctor. They see thousands of trans. Dilation Long Term

I tried my best to cope with it for the next year or so, plucking the hairs the best to my ability, but by 7 years post-op, I was just kind of sick of the upkeep of cleaning it, dilating, and trying to deal with the hair. I was going through a rough spot with chronic health conditions, declining mental health, and no partners/sexual desire so I just decided to stop the uncomfortable dilating sessions and deal with the consequences later. It was nice ignoring it for awhile, but by 8 years post-op I was starting to have some pelvic pain near the surgery site even though I wasn't using the neovag canal anymore. I ended up getting new, smaller dilators to see if that would help the pain, and I found out I have about 3 or so inches left in depth... So now I still have to dilate and clean it out to help reduce the pain and discomfort in the area, even though I don't really view it as a viable sexual organ anymore (especially the neovag canal)."

Odor will change from a somewhat foul 'healing odor' to a more natural 'feminine odor' over 6-12 weeks. Douching during this period with warm water and capful of vinegar is acceptable. Beyond 12 weeks, douching is discouraged as it depletes the vagina of bacteria that maintain the normal vaginal health and well-being."

I'm not not sure what else to call these. They can be quite disturbing to view. Take this as a warning to be very careful choosing a surgeon, and personally I'd assume they are bad until proven otherwise rather than the other way around.

I've only put a few here, but there are (many) more listed on the surgeons pages.

Cowpers Cyst

revision, I complained to my surgeon about some swelling in the area next to my urethra, on one side. It was swollen and slightly dark-colored. She suggested it may be a cyst, and prescribed some cream to see if it would resolve itself. It didn't resolve itself. The swelling remained and it was somewhat inconvenient and occasionally uncomfortable for a number of months. Finally, I flew to NY for a post-op visit, and the Dr was able to take a closer look. Her conclusion was that it was a "cowper's cyst" - a cyst formed from cowper's gland fluid, possibly from some blockage in the duct. She nicked it with some scissors and allowed it to drain. It's been a few days since then, and the swelling has gone down considerably. It's my hope that the cyst is resolved. If it comes back, I'll have to schedule a surgery in NY for a more thorough cyst excision. Notably, Dr. RBL mentioned that she does occasionally see this happen with some bottom surgery patients, but did not know why it occurs."

Silver nitrate certainly works for granulation tissue, but I think it is absolutely not the best option for post-op trans people. It stains the tissue and can leave semi-permanent "tattoos" it tends to spread beyond where you want it to go and can atrophy other tissue a little bit, and its only somewhat effective. Steroid injections are also commonly used for overly prolific granulation tissue, but once again, hard to keep where you put them and its easy to overshoot and cause atrophy. What would be a lot better would be a topical steroid, but in a wet area, creams/ointments just spread around like mad. There exists "triamcinolone dental paste". The stuff is hydroscopic and was designed to be placed in the mouth on aphthous ulcerations (canker sores). As a result, you can take a little dab of this paste, and push it onto the cancer sore, and it rapidly absorbs water from the surrounding tissues and glues itself in place, eluting the steroid directly at the site of application but minimal exposure to the surrounding* hopefully things heal over right. If not, and it starts to come back, you just bonk it again with another coating once a day until you get where you need to be. This is far less irritating, seems to be extremely effective, and is highly precise. I couldn't find any evidence when I searched of this drug in studies or elsewhere being used in this fashion, and its exceptionally effective and in my opinion superior to that of other options. Sorry I didn't post on this one before, sometimes I do stuff and not really think about it being a big deal, but I've had a few of these in a row lately and the patients commented on how much more convenient/effective it was and I realized I should prob post it up."

Pain

Pain is common in the weeks/months after surgery. A small percentage of women have severe pain for longer.

Possible reasons for pain include

- Everyone recovers at a different rate and has different experiences of pain. Even when everything is normal some people will have significant levels of pain for months while others have very little even while still in hospital.
- Pain in the weeks after surgery is common, and would likely be treated with drugs, potentially quite strong.
- Standard painkillers do not work for some people and they need to try alternatives. This can happen in hospital as well as afterwards. Some doctors are very poor at prescribing good painkillers (because of potential for abuse).
- Granulation, especially if it's in a sensitive spot. This can last a long time and worst case may need revision.
- Scar contraction. This can last a long time and worst case may need revision.
- Sutures can be sharp and poke in sensitive spots.
- UTI's can be horribly painful. These need medical treatment. Standard tests do not show up all possible UTI's so a negative test does not necessarily mean you do not have one. Some UTI's will need different antibiotics.
- Infection.
- Recreational drug use can give a very high tolerance for painkillers (opiates) to the point they don't work and doctors are too scared to give you more. Worse, you may also have an increased sensitivity to pain.

pain. I immediately stated that I am currently in severe pain. She then said that I can't be in that much pain, and when I said I am, she said that the pain must be from something else and can't be from surgery... The entire time they saw me I was in severe pain and completely unable to sit down at all. Sarah, the nurse practitioner there, made it seem like I was drug seeking and "refusing" to cooperate and essentially wrote the visit notes that way. She said they can only treat post op pain, not chronic pain (I literally just had surgery that week!!!)... He then went on a long speech about how he had a patient like me before and how his supervisor is supportive of him not operating on anyone he doesn't want to, etc. That was the last I had talked to him... He apparently has a habit of doing this. Since this happened to me, I've talked to/heard of at least 5 other people who were treated like this or dropped as patients by Nikolavsky... I would never recommend him to anyone. I regret seeing him and it permanently traumatized me. For months it was difficult to feel any sort of sensation in my penis because I was terrified it would turn into severe pain."

- Warning about Dmitry Nikolavsky in Syracuse, NY by warningDMSyracuse in 2023 - "He does not provide adequate pain meds for a lot of people. He gives tramadol, Tylenol, and celebrex for pain by default. No stringer opioids. Even if you think you'd find that to be enough for pain, I strongly, strongly, STRONGLY recommend you tell Nikolavsky that you don't do well with pain at your consult. That way, the office will make an appointment with their pain management clinic (which is like 15 to 20 minutes drive from the hospital) and THEY'LL have to give you/clear you for pain meds. Context: I had no fucking clue they'd do this and was left suffering, I was completely unable to do anything but cry and scream for a week and Nikolavsky's team did nothing about it but minimize my pain and gaslight me ... I have a medication listed in my allergies and his team came in while I was in the hospital and less than 24 hours post op to try and pressure me into taking that medication. During my post op visit, he came in with a resident and when I asked who he was and why he was there, the way he answered made it seem like I wasn't allowed to say no to him being there. "

Postural Orthostatic Tachycardia Syndrome

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Postural_orthostatic_tachycardia_syndrome - "Postural orthostatic tachycardia syndrome (POTS) is a condition characterized by an abnormally large increase in heart rate upon standing. POTS is a disorder of the autonomic nervous system that can lead the individual to experience a variety of symptoms. Symptoms may include lightheadedness, brain fog, blurred vision, weakness, fatigue, headaches, heart palpitations, exercise intolerance, nausea, diminished concentration, tremulousness (shaking), syncope (fainting), coldness or pain in the extremities, chest pain and shortness of breath. Other conditions associated with POTS include Ehlers–Danlos syndrome, mast cell activation syndrome, irritable bowel syndrome, insomnia, chronic headaches, chronic fatigue syndrome, fibromyalgia., and amplified musculoskeletal pain syndrome."

I'm a big case and it happens basically every day once or twice cause I'm dumb and don't take time to get up. You usually get some seconds of grace of your vision going black and can act quicky by bending down or if it's bad enough sit or lay down to avoid fainting. If it gets to the point of shaking uncontrollably you're most likely going down." - also see the reply "What youre describing in this comment is orthostatic hypotension not POTS."

Urinary Tract Infection

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Urinary_tract_infection - "A urinary tract infection (UTI) is an infection that affects part of the urinary tract. When it affects the lower urinary tract it is known as a bladder infection (cystitis) and when it affects the upper urinary tract it is known as a kidney infection (pyelonephritis).[10] Symptoms from a lower urinary tract infection include pain with urination, frequent urination, and feeling the need to urinate despite having an empty bladder. Symptoms of a kidney infection include fever and flank pain usually in addition to the symptoms of a lower UTI. Rarely the urine may appear bloody. In the very old and the very young, symptoms may be vague or non-specific."

Regret

Be aware that there are some hate subs targeting transgender people on reddit by misrepresenting surgery, regret, and detransition. I've not linked to them as the discussion there is very misleading and quite disturbing. If you're not sure if you're looking at a hate sub go to subredditstats.com and look at how the users of the sub overlap with known hate subs like gendercritical, itsafetish, lgbdrophet, detrans, etc (don't go looking at those subs, you'll only get upset).

Regret is rare, but there are a few cases.
